“ A good listener, great friend, and better father..

Harry was 'old-school.'

He seldom asked for favors, spoke out of turn, or accepted charity.

His opinions were 'black and white', and based on the word of God.

Rather than regret missed opportunities I should've taken to visit with Harry, I'll hold on tightly to the times I did.

The greatest compliment in life is to be remembered after death, and I will never forget my friend, 'Hank.'

“ So sorry to hear about the passing of uncle Harry. He has gone home, but will always be near. I remember how welcome he made my husband feel when we stopped to visit on our way to my husband's duty station in California. I especially remember him playing guitar. My deepest sympathy is with his family. Love and prayers. Jenny Joseph Brown
